

Contents

Foreword	vii
Introduction	ix
Chapter 1: Inevitability of Ethics in Democracy	1
1. Philosophical Reading of Ethics	1
2. Diverse Views on Democracy	4
2.1. Democracy as Success	4
2.2. Democracy as Failure	5
3. Characteristic Features of Democracy	7
3.1. Rulers from Citizens	8
3.2. Majorities and Minorities	9
3.3. Principle of Protection	10
3.4. Limiting the Duration	11
3.5. Supremacy of Law	12
4. Types of Ethics in Democracy	12
4.1. Ethics of Process	13
4.2. Ethics of Policy	14
4.3. Ethics of Neutrality	16
4.4. Ethics of Polity	18
Chapter 2: Administrator: The Responsible Propagator of Ethics	21
1. Public Administration	21
1.1. Challenges	24
1.2. Limitations	24
2. Administrator in Democracy	26
2.1. Ruler	29
2.1.1. Accountability	30
2.1.2. Responsiveness	31

2.2. Expertise	32
2.3. Public Servant	33
2.4. Co-producer	34
2.4.1. Decision Making	35
2.4.2. Participation	37
2.5. Transparent Employee	39
Chapter 3: Towards a New Perception of Ethics in Administration	43
1. Administration under Reformation	43
1.1. The Reform Era	43
1.2. The New Public Administration Era	45
1.3. The Reconstruction Era	47
1.4. The Reinvention Era	50
1.5. The Spiritualism Era	52
2. Wilson's Vision of Democracy	55
2.1. The Role of People in Democracy	57
2.2. Sovereignty and Power in Democracy	59
2.3. Politics-Administration Dichotomy	59
3. Perceived Advantage	63
4. Perceived Disadvantages	64
5. Critical Remarks	65
6. Required Changes in Indian Politics	67
Conclusion	71
Bibliography	75