

Contents

Acknowledgement	ix
Forward	xi
Introduction	xv

Chapter One 1

The Feminist Theology of Rosemary Ruether and its Limitation

1. Introduction	1
2. Ruether's Feminist Theology	2
2.1 Ruether's Dialectical Methodology	4
2.2 Three Themes in Ruether's Work	10
2.2.1 The Image of Woman in the Church	11
2.2.2 The Nature and Condition of Evil: Implications for Women	17
2.2.3 Feminist Theological Reconstruction	24
2.3 Conclusion	29
3. Kristeva's Insight	33
4. Conclusion	36

Chapter Two 39

The Trajectory of Kristeva's Thought

1. Introduction	39
2. Four Stages	43

2.1	First Stage:
	The Bulgaria-Paris Transition: 1966 to 1974	43
2.1.1	La révolution du langage poétique:
	An Introduction	46
2.1.2	Mikhail Bakhtin	47
2.1.3	Roland Barthes	49
2.1.4	Emile Benveniste	50
2.1.5	Georges Bataille	51
2.1.6	Ferdinand de Saussure	52
2.1.7	Jacques Lacan	52
2.1.8	Summary	53
2.2	Second Stage: The China Experience and Kristeva's Shift: 1974 to 1980	54
2.3	Third Stage: The Speaking Subject and the Human Psyche: Horror, Love, Melancholy	56
2.3.1	Powers of Horror	59
2.3.2	Tales of Love	62
2.3.3	Black Sun	64
2.3.4	Summary	65
2.4	Fourth Stage: "Psychoanalysts in Times of Distress" Dissident and Stranger; Exile and Healer	65
2.4.1	Strangers to Ourselves and Nations Without Nationalism	67
2.4.2	Novelistic Discourse	69
2.5	Conclusion	70
3.	Critiques of Kristeva's Work	71
3.1	Introduction	71
3.2	Bi-polar Reactions	73
3.3	Moving Beyond the Bi-polar	79
4.	Conclusion	84

Chapter Three	85
Revolution in Poetic Language
1. Introduction	85
2. Revolution in Poetic Language	90
2.1 Preliminary Investigations	90
2.2 The Semiotic and the Symbolic	95
2.2.1 Kristeva's Expanded Sense of "Text"	104
2.3 Negativity	107
2.4 Heterogeneity	115
2.5 Practice	120
2.6 Conclusion	122
Chapter Four	125
The Ramifications of Kristeva's Theory: Abjection and Ethics
1. Introduction	125
2. Powers of Horror: An Essay in Abjection	127
2.1 Analytic Theory	133
2.2 The History of Religions	137
2.3 Céline's Horror	142
3. Kristeva's Ethics: Ambiguous and Irreconcilable	144
3.1 Poetry as a Model for Ethics	145
3.2 Maternity as a Model for Ethics	147
3.3 Psychoanalysis as a Model for Ethics	149
4. Conclusion	153
Chapter Five	155
A Comparative Analysis of Kristeva and Ruether
1. Introduction	155
2. Synopsis of Key Insights in the Thought of Julia Kristeva	156
2.1 Otherness, Totalitarianism and the Crisis of the Speaking Subject	156
2.2 The Body and Language: Kristeva's Dialectical Methodology	159

2.3 Language as Subversive and the Ethical Function of Practice	162
2.4 Ramifications of Kristeva's Insights for Feminist Theology and Christian Ethics.	164
3. Key Concerns and Contributions of Ruether	167
4. Kristeva's Correctives and Contributions to Ruether . .	171
5. Ruether's Correctives and Contributions to Kristeva . .	180
Conclusion	193
Selected Bibliography	197
Works by Julia Kristeva	197
Secondary Literature About Kristeva	200
Related Works	204
Index of Subjects	211
Index of Authors	215