

Contents

Foreword	xi
Acknowledgement	xiii
Abbreviations	xvii
Introduction	xix
Chapter 1: Searching the Anthropological Corollary in the Context of Cyberspace	1
Introduction	1
1.1. Defining Cyberspace	1
1.1.1. Understanding Authenticity	3
1.1.2. Inhabiting Cyberspace	4
1.1.3. On Being Human in Cyberspace	6
1.2. What is Posthumanism?	7
1.3. Transhumanism	9
1.3.1. The Upload Scenario	10
1.3.2. Democratic Transhumanism	12
1.3.3. Singularitarianism	13
1.3.4. Summary	14
1.4. Placing the Discourse of Cyborg under Posthumanism	15
1.4.1. Non-Teleological Cyborg	16
1.4.2. Cyborg Anthropology	19
1.4.2.1. How do Humans Become Cyborgs?	19
1.4.2.2. Cyborg-Cyberspace Continuum	20
1.4.2.3. Making of Cyborg in Cyberspace	21
1.4.2.4. Digital Cyborg	22

1.4.2.5. Embodied Cyborgs	24
1.5. Conclusion	24
Chapter 2: Exploring the Landscape of Theological Anthropology	27
Introduction	27
2.1. Theological Anthropology: A Definition	28
2.1.1. Varied Understandings in Theological Anthropology	28
2.1.2. Fluid Images of God	30
2.2. Typologies of Imago Dei	31
2.2.1. Functional Typology	32
2.2.2. Choosing an Imago Dei Motif under Functional Typology	35
2.2.3. Substantive Typology	36
2.2.4. Relational Typology	41
2.3. Christology as the Lens for Theological Anthropology	44
2.4. Conclusion	45
Chapter 3: Hybridity: Cyborg and Created Co-Creator as Dialogical Partners	47
Introduction	47
3.1. Hybridity as Methodology	48
3.1.1. Hybridity Contests Substantive and Essentialist Concepts of Purity	50
3.1.2. Hybridity: Deconstructing the Concept of Nature	51
3.2. Cyborg: Hybridity in the Realm of Cyberspace	53
3.2.1. Articulation of Cyborg	53
3.2.2. Cultural Cyborg	54
3.2.3. Humans as Cyborgs	55
3.2.4. Summary	57
3.3. Created Co-Creator	57
3.3.1. Why use Created Co-Creator?	58
3.3.1.1. Understanding of God	59
3.3.1.2. Paradigm of Jesus	60
3.3.1.3. Understanding Human Beings	60

3.3.1.4. The Present Context	61
3.3.1.5. Myths and Rituals	62
3.3.1.6. Relevance to the Context of Cyberspace	62
3.4. Created Co-Creator and Hybridity	63
3.4.1. Humans Being as “Created”	63
3.4.2. Human Beings Are ‘Co-Creators’	64
3.4.3. Created Co-Creator as a Hybrid Concept that Bridges between Theological and Secular	66
3.4.4. Summary	68
3.5. Hybridity in Cyborg and CCC as a Metaphor of Transgressing Boundaries	69
3.6. Conclusion	70
Chapter 4: Reworking Created Co-Creator in Search     of an Authentic Christian Human Formation	71
Introduction	71
4.1. Analyzing the Limitations of the Created Co-Creator Debate	72
4.2. Understanding Cyberspace as a Context for Ministry	73
4.3. Christological Reworking of the ‘Co’	74
4.3.1. Negotiating the Creator-Created Chasm through Divine-Human Debate of Christology	74
4.3.2. Emphasizing Materiality and Creatureliness through Christological Formulations	76
4.3.3. Reworking the Telos through Omega Point and Christology	78
4.3.4. Introducing Limits through Kenotic Christology	81
4.3.5. Introducing Hope through Christological Dimensions of Resurrection and Eschatology	83
4.4. ‘Co’ as the Christological Hybridity that Reformulates Created Co-Creator	86
4.4.1. Searching the Divine as the Possibility of Ultimate Humanity	86
4.4.2. Redemption of Materiality and Creatureliness Espouses New Ethics	87

4.4.3. Encountering the Limits through Kenotic Christology	87
4.4.4. Understanding the Telos through Omega Point and Christogenesis	88
4.4.5. The Dimension of Hope through Resurrection and Eschatology	89
4.5. Conclusion	90
Final Conclusion	91
Bibliography	95