Contents

Foreword ix
Preface xvii

Introduction 1

Chapter 1: Impossibility of Real and Rational Belief: The Spirit of Liberalism in Religion 17

1.1. Liberalism in Religion as False Liberty of Thought 17
1.2. The Problem of Epistemological Overextension 22
1.3. Consequence: Denial of the Possibility of Real and Rational Belief 28

Chapter 2: Possibility of Real and Rational Belief in Newman's Grammar 33

2.1. The Foundation of Belief: Apprehension and Simple Assent 36
2.2. From Inference to Certitude: The Pathway to Rational Assent 45
2.3. The Culmination in Concrete Reason: The Illative Sense and Rational Belief 50

Chapter 3: Apologia as a Testament to the Possibility of Real and Rational Belief 55

3.1. The Foundation of Certitude: Early Conversion and the Rejection of Mere Logic 56

3.2. The Pilgrimage of Reason: The Via Media and the Convergence of Evidence 60

3.3. Arriving at Port: Complex Assent as Lived Experience 62

Chapter 4: New Atheism: A Fresh Perspective or Recycled Ideas? 65

4.1. Describing New Atheism 66

4.2. Fundamental Tenets of New Atheism 69

4.3. Exploring the 'New' in New Atheism 72

Chapter 5: Newman's Grammar: A Relevant Response to Dawkins' God Hypothesis' 81

5.1. Dawkins' 'God Hypothesis' 81

5.2. The "God of the Gaps": Framing Faith as Faulty Logic 85

5.3. Newman's Grammar as Relevant Response 88

Conclusion 99

Bibliography 105

Appendix-I 121

Appendix-II 127